PRESIDENT WILSON TRULY GREAT (?)

The Washington Post says: "In regard to Mexico, the President of the United States has shown an element of true greatness by frankly announcing that he has changed his mind."

If frankly announcing that he has changed his mind is an evidence of true greatness it must be conceded that President Wilson has few equals and no superiors, for he has not only changed his mind once, but he has changed it twice in regard to the Mexican situation, and has, upon a number of other occasions, changed it in regard to several other questions of public interest.

In May, 1914, he declared his intention of securing the removal of the de facto head of the Mexican government and of transferring in Mexican affairs in other respects, particularly in the control of the public land policies of that government. A few months later, in his speech in Indianapolis, he frankly announced that he had changed his mind and asserted that there must be no interference and that Mexico must work out her problems without the assistance or influence of this country. Now he just as frankly announces that he has again reversed himself and proposes to exert an active and aggressive influence in controlling internal affairs of that afflicted country.

A few years ago President Wilson was writing books in which he denounced the initiative and referendum, but when he became a candidate for President, he frankly announced that he had been mistaken and advocated those principles of popular government. Prior to his election he was a devout advocate of the Presidential primary law, but in recent months he has made known his opinion that legislation of this kind is impracticable.

On the stump, when he was seeking the votes of the American people, he was an outspoken advocate of free tolls for American coastwise shipping through the Panama Canal, but soon after he had come into a position of power, he frankly announced his change of mind and forced through Congress a law repealing the free tolls provision.

As a candidate he was a champion of civil service reform and for many years was vice president of the Civil Service Reform League, but as a dispenser of patronage he has resorted to the spoils system to such a large extent as to indicate a complete and astonishing change of mind.

He denounced extravagance in public business and pledged himself to an economical administration, but after election, in an address to Congress, he frankly announced his change of mind by saying that in his opinion the American people did not care how much money was spent provided they received something in return for it.

Truly, it must be conceded that in frankly announcing changes of mind, President Wilson is unsurpassed, and if this be an element of true greatness, as the Washington Post assumes, this Democratic President will go down in history without a peer.

MODERN SHAKESPEARE.

All the world's a film.
Baseball acquaints a man with strange Fed. fellows.

The course of true peace never did run smooth. Discussion is the best part of Villa.

It's a wise stock that knows its own par.

For in my youth I never did apply hot and rebellious grape juice in my blood.

An editor once wrote an editorial entitled "The Naked Truth." The office devil lifted the "T" and made it read "The Naked Ruth," but it happened in high society and was only an incident of the day. And this just reminds us that down among normal human beings clothing makes the man, and the lack of it makes him stare.

As an evidence that the uplift movement has struck Mexico, General Villa is to operate a shoe factory.

And now the remnants of the world are about ready to take the plunge.

Victory By Surprise.

"The Serbians surprised even themselves with their crushing victory over the Austrian armies under Potiorek," said Dr. Milton Hamburger, the German critic, in an address before the German-American Society of Denver.

"Yes, the Serbians were the most surprised of all. It's like the case of Gobsa Golde."

"Two plutocrats sat at a window of the Metropolitan Club when a beautiful girl of seventeen or eighteen glided by in a magnificent gray car."

"Young Mrs. Gobsa Golde," said the first plutocrat. He smiled and added, "I don't suppose anybody was surprised when old Gobsa eloped with her—she was his stenographer, you know."

"No," said the second plutocrat. "No, nobody was surprised except Gobsa himself."

GOOD HOUSEKEEPING IS THE ROAD TO ECONOMY.

From the Kitchen Garden.

In almost every kitchen garden parsley grows, and at every well arranged dinner one, or many times one, dish is garnished with the dainty, curling leaves. From this one might think that we are inordinately fond of the plant, and so we are, but not so much for its food value as for its appearance.

There is hardly another plant that will retain its fresh, green color and crispness when placed against hot foods, or laid on heated platters as parsley does.

Even when heated it does not lose its character—witness fried parsley—after it is washed and picked over it is dried in a towel, cut small and dropped in a little hot butter, tossed for a moment, and it comes from the heat as green looking as ever.

This fried parsley is used on foods that must remain covered some time before they are served. For ordinary garnishing the plant is washed, the long stems clipped away, and the leaves kept rolled in a cool, wet cloth or paper until used.

Shallots have a mild and pleasant flavor and are used in place of onions and garlic by those who are acquainted with their superiority. They grow in any garden soil and may be kept in a dry, light place until needed.

Horseradish comes up in the garden year after year, and until it spreads beyond its bounds, little attention is given it. However, try to get it started in an uncongenial spot or from too old a root and you will think it the most contrary plant in the world. When fresh it is a great addition to all meats, and is even liked in salads, so it is worth growing. If you plant little roots about five inches long they will start quickly and soon develop a burning, spicy taste that marks them ready to grate and use.

The French make a horseradish butter by grating the root and mixing it with fresh butter and keeping it in a cool place. This is excellent on fresh bread with cold meat.

A relish that Germans love is a mixture of grated horseradish and apple sauce pressed through a fine sieve. The juice of an orange or of a lemon may be added to it.

"KARLSRUHE."

Washington, D. C.—Karlsruhe, the south German city successfully attacked recently by a squadron of French aeroplanes, is described in today's war primer of the National Geographic Society as follows:

"Karlsruhe, which might be anglicized as 'Charles' peace of mind," was founded by Karl Wilhelm, margrave of Baden, who built himself a hunting lodge here in 1715, where he might escape the grumblings and disputes of the people of his residence at Durlach. Consistent with the ideals of its foundation, the calm peace of Karlsruhe has never been broken. It is the most untroubled, temperate and composed of all German cities. Push, alertness, nervous ambition, business energy, all these qualities that have come to mark the life of the striving, rapidly progressing cities of the Fatherland, are mellowed and softened in the atmosphere of the town of 'Karl's rest.'

"The sky-bombarded city is the capital of the Grand-Duchy of Baden, commercially, educationally and socially of high rank among the cities of the empire. It is situated to the east of the Rhine, on the Frankfort-on-the-Main-Basel railway, about thirty-nine miles northwest of Stuttgart and thirty-three miles southwest of Heidelberg. It is about seventy miles from the French border, and some forty-six miles northwest of Strassburg. Karlsruhe contains many fine buildings, private and public, bordering the broad avenues, which radiate in the form of an expanded fan from the Palace place. The city is surrounded by beautiful parks and gardens, under whose tree-covered walks the people enjoy the contented, mild philosophy of their traditions."

"Since the establishment of the empire in 1871, the commerce and industries of Karlsruhe have gone steadily ahead, and the city has rapidly multiplied its wealth and population. It numbers now about 115,000, not including a considerable peace times' military stationed there. It is the headquarters of the XIV German army corps. Extensive railway shops and a large arms factory are two of the most important industrial branches."

Canada has a stamp tax in force now. The first lot of stamps was sent to Toronto the other day, and proved many times too small, as was the case in this country when the new stamp tax recently went into effect. That city got 50,000 stamps, and says it needed half a million.

OILING THE STREETS.

How It Is Done In Other Cities and Countries.

The following item was sent The Ledger by one of its readers, and is of a timely nature and interest to those who want the streets oiled:

"The city administration has begun the work of oiling the streets and is to be commended for the excellent beginning it has made. The work is being done carefully, intelligently and thoroughly. This gives assurance of good results that should be eminently satisfactory to the citizens of Frankfort. The streets are being swept thoroughly in advance of the oiling and the oil is being applied evenly with the proper mixture of sand to give durability of effect and freedom from the excessive stickiness which is to be noted in some cases when oil is applied to streets and highways.—The State Journal.

"The State Journal congratulates the Mayor of Frankfort and the officials and employees under his direction upon the manner in which the oil is being applied."

"The people of Frankfort are to be congratulated upon having a government which wants to attend to public business in a business-like way, and desires to give the taxpayer a square deal."

"The best use has never been made of oil in Jefferson county. Traffic has been allowed upon the county roads and also in the parks—to pass over the oil before it has soaked into the road and the oiling is done without sand. The county roads are oiled with the dust upon them. Vehicles passing over them pick up large hunks of oil, dust and screenings, breaking the binder and leaving the macadam in a condition to water-rot and wear badly. The park roadways usually are in better condition when the oil is applied, but often are opened when the oil is still a sticky, slippery surface, dangerous to automobiles and injurious to all vehicles."

"Whenever a road slippery with fresh oil is allowed to remain open—in violation of the specifications which provide for half of it to remain open while the other half is being oiled—someone should be prosecuted. But no one has been, and for that reason the contractors who apply the oil do as little work as may be done to collect the money."—Courier-Journal.

MELANCHOLY WOMEN

Women should understand that melancholy, commonly called the "Blues," is in nine times out of ten a pure symptom of some organic derangement which should have attention. For nearly forty years Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from roots and herbs, has been the standard remedy for such conditions, as proved by many testimonials which we are constantly publishing from women who have been restored to health by its use.

FILMS MADE FROM SKIMMED MILK.

The menace of a "film famine" which, because of the European war threatened to hurt the American moving picture industry, has been banished. Moving picture film is being made out of skimmed milk. The first roll of practical skimmed milk film was shown in the exhibit of the Illinois state food commission at the national dairy show.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure acts internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars to anyone that it fails to cure. Send for free literature.
